PARENT RESOURCES

The pandemic has changed the reality for parents, students, teachers, and our entire school system. Yet, we know many of these challenges are not new and have only now been more publicly highlighted by the current pandemic. Research is needed in order to continue to explore the needs of working parents balancing employment and the responsibilities inherent in being a parent.

We are looking for parents of young children (birth through elementary school) willing to complete an online survey in order to capture current work/family balance circumstances with the option to participate in a voluntary follow-up interview. We also ask that you share/forward this email and survey link with other local families, so we can better understand the needs of working parents with young children in Butte County.

You can find the link to the survey attached to this post below.

This study is approved through the Human Subjects and Research Committee (HSRC) at California State University, Chico.

TEACHER CORNER

In First Grade, Ms. McDonald and her students are completing their journey through the letters. “Every day, draw an image from a story and in that image we find a letter. This image is the letter Z for the lightning that zigzags through the air.”
